Water safety

Now we're into summer and enjoying the warmer weather, lots of families will be taking advantage of the opportunity to go swimming outdoors ('wild swimming'). This might be in the sea or perhaps a lake or river. It's really important to do this safely: parents/carers should take steps to keep their children safe, while also ensuring their children have the awareness needed to help keep themselves safe.

Things to remember when swimming outdoors:

-  Do your research on the location beforehand to make sure it's considered a safe place to swim.
-  Always have adults there to supervise under 18s. No one should swim alone outdoors.
-  Be careful when entering the water, particularly if it's slippery. It's easy to fall by stepping on wet rocks. Find a safe place to enter and leave the water and don't swim too far from that spot.
-  Even when the weather is lovely and warm, open water can be very cold under the surface. This can cause cramp and make it harder to breathe. Enter gradually to help your body acclimatise.
-  Always check the depth of the water - even if you have visited the spot before - before jumping or diving in.
-  Don't enter fast flowing water and watch out for currents! Look for warning signs around the water which could let you know of any hazards.
-  There may be hidden danger underneath the water - rubbish, sharp items, reeds and weeds. Keep an eye out to avoid getting tangled or cut.

On the beach:

-  Make sure you and your children understand what the flags mean - use Google if you're not sure.
-  Be aware of waves and changing tides. Avoid the sea near piers and rocky areas.
-  Inflatables are a hazard in the sea, as it's easy to be taken out of your depth by the wind and currents.

At home:

-  Always supervise children in or near water, no matter how shallow.
-  Ponds should be fenced off and covered in mesh. Paddling pools, baths and sinks should be emptied after use.

In an emergency, always dial 999 - you don't need to have credit or minutes on your phone.
